

Alexis Koontz

“And that’s what she said!”

This piece is about women and the stereotype that they tend to gossip. It's a common cliché repeated so many times in the media. Women like to talk about other women's lives, usually speculating about problems they don't have. I thought it would be an interesting topic to paint and share.

Alexis Koontz

“Teeth”

This piece is about teeth. I have an odd interest in teeth, everyone has a different set of teeth, uniquely their own, just like fingerprints. Today I have perfectly aligned teeth due to years of braces so I don't feel as if my teeth are that interesting, unlike someone with their natural forming teeth. I believe teeth tell stories of someones life, or at least their experiences.

Alexis Koontz

“Unknown beneath the car”

This piece represents my fear of the unknown beneath my car. I've always had an irrational fear of the darkness beneath my Car, I never know what could be down there, maybe an animal or maybe a crazy person looking to slice my achilles.

