“Picasso-Self Portrait”

What does this artwork represent or mean to you?

I was a little depressed because I only have a small amount of friends and I was really missing my friends from Wichita. However, things have gotten better and that's why I added the swirls.

“Staring at the Ceiling”

There is no reason why I'm staring or looking at the walls and ceiling but to me at the moment I was daydreaming or thinking about plans for the next to come. A daydreamer is a person who often thinks about doing something else or being somewhere else, instead of paying attention to what is happening where they are now. Many discover this ability early on in childhood, realising fantasy and daydreams can be used to regulate distress. By creating an inner world of comfort, they're able to escape from reality. Is it OK to be a daydreamer?
